How do we assess your application?

Admission procedure

The main steps in the admission procedure involve an (1) assessment of your application, which when positively evaluated will result in (2) an invitation for an interview and test, and (3) an email about your admission status (details below).

Assessment of your application

The Board of Admissions will carefully assess all complete applications.

Test and interview

Applicants who meet the admission requirements will be invited for the second part of the selection procedure and are evaluated to be qualified candidates for this programme (within three weeks after the application deadline).

Candidates will take a test of basic knowledge in psychology, research methods, and statistics. Depending on the evaluation of the application documents and the outcome of the test, candidates will either be offered a place in the study programme or invited to an individual interview with members of the Joint Board of Admissions..

Based on all available information, the Joint Board of Admissions assesses the knowledge and skills level, attitude and motivation relevant to the programme that embraces the scientist-innovator model. The following selection criteria apply:

- motivation and willingness to acquire knowledge in the area of work and organisational psychology;
- motivation and ability to critically analyse the research base in the specific domain of work and organisational psychology;
- attitude and communication skills necessary for a future career in the relevant settings;
- motivation and ability to further scientific developments in the field of work and organisational psychology;

- openness to learning within different international environments;
- motivation and ability to follow this two-year programme, that involves living in three different European countries;
- excellent command of English.

Interviews and tests will be online.

Selection outcome

The Joint Board of Admissions offers places according to the established ranking. Once the Joint Board of Admissions has made a decision whether an applicant qualifies for admission, candidates will be informed via Studielink.

Note: only complete applications will be assessed. We therefore recommend that you adhere to the deadlines provided in the table under 'Important deadlines for application for this study programme' on this page.
